County adopts animal shelter agreement

Casey's stray animals now will be taken to Adair County

By Larry Rowell
Staff Writer

Casey County's stray dogs and cats will now be taken to a different animal shelter.

Casey County Judge/Executive Ronald Wright recommended to magistrates in Monday's meeting that stray animals be sent to the Green River Animal Shelter (GRAS) in Adair County.

Previously, animals from Casey County have been taken to the Taylor County Animal Shelter in Campbellsville.

The Taylor County Shelter has been the center of controversy from animal rights' groups alleging shelter employees didn't properly care for its animals, a charge that Taylor County Judge/Executive Eddie Rogers vehemently denies.

ly denies.

Rogers officially notified Wright last week that the Taylor shelter would no longer be accepting animals from other counties. The contract between Taylor and Casey counties called for a 45 day cancellation notice.

While not closing, the shelter will become a holding station for only Taylor County's dogs and cats as of mid-April.

Wright outlined for magistrates the terms of the new contract, which is similar to the one Taylor County used.

Casey County Animal Control Officer Ricky Luttrell will transport animals to GRAS where they will be housed for no less than five days before being euthanized.

For five days, the cost is $8.80 a day per animal, for a total charge per animal of $44, which includes vaccinations and worming, food and water, and euthanize and disposal, if the dog isn't adopted.

"They'll keep a dog longer if we ask them to, at $8.80 a day," Wright said.

In addition, Casey Fiscal Court agrees to use GRAS exclusively for animal services during the term of this contract.

GRAS will bill fiscal court on a monthly basis, the contract is for one year, and either party may cancel the contract by giving 30 days notice.

Concerning an annual cost for using GRAS, Wright said it's hard to tell what the new service will cost.

Casey County budgeted $18,500 last year for the agreement with Taylor County and it's unclear if the move to GRAS will be a cost saving measure.

EDA issues loan to SnapDolls

Funding tied to local job creation

By Larry Rowell
Staff Writer

A start-up loan to a local entrepreneur has been signed and the funds distributed.

SnapDolls, a children's clothing company owned by Brian and Stacey Beeler, signed the agreement for the $100,000 loan from the Liberty-Casey County Economic Development Authority, said EDA Director Blaine Staat in a meeting on Feb. 25.

The Beelers had originally asked for a 10-year, low, or no interest $250,000 loan back in August.

However, the EDA decided to offer Beeler a $100,000, 10-year loan at 2 percent interest, to be repaid quarterly beginning July 1. The EDA also attached conditions to the loan:

■ The loan is to be tied directly to local job creation with 10 jobs at $10,000 each.

■ SnapDolls and any associated jobs will remain in Casey County for the duration of the loan.

■ The company was to have had a minimum of $100,000 on hand from other sources.

■ The loan was to have been approved by the Department of Local Government in Frankfort.

In addition to the EDA loan, SnapDolls recently received a $50,000 grant from Casey County Fiscal Court.

The grant, awarded and approved by the Cabinet for Economic Development, is from funds that had been repaid to the county by OBG (OshKosh) Manufacturing Co., who originally got the grant in 2003. The company, which closed the end of 2005, repaid the money because it failed to keep 60 employees on the

Committee raising money for Casey County's COLLEGE FUND

Construction on the Casey County Education and Community Center in downtown Liberty is scheduled to begin in late August and be completed in about nine months. A committee is seeking funding for the $3.6 million project through grants and donations. To date, $1.2 million has been raised with an additional $500,000 expected in mid-March.

Plans for new college in Liberty accelerating

By Larry Rowell
Staff Writer

The Casey County Education and Community Center is quickly becoming a reality, with plans to get financing in place for the $3.6 million project.

Community and government leaders, along with representatives from Somerset Community College, Campbellsville University and Lindsey Wilson College met on Feb. 27 at City Hall to begin finalizing plans for the new college.

All three colleges will be working together to offer courses through the new college that has been in the works for more than three years.

In addition, Brad Boaz and Jack Ballard, architects with CMW Architects of Lexington, the chief design architects for the project, met with the college committee prior to the planning session on Wednesday to discuss utilities and finishing touches such as fixtures and other interior decorating choices.

"We hope to break ground in late August because of the Community Development Block Grant guidelines," said Liberty Mayor Steve Sweeney, who has worked on the college in conjunction with Casey County Judge/Executive

“We can raise the money through private donations, bond it, or borrow it. But what we need people to do is go ahead and contribute so we have to borrow less money.”

Ronald Wright and other community leaders.

The college recently received a $500,000 grant as a CDBG and the guidelines call for construction to begin within five months of accepting the grant. The grant also specifies that the building be completed within 40 weeks.

To date, the committee has raised approximately $1.2 million, comprising $500,000 combined from the city and county, and $500,000 from the CDBG.

The Liberty-Casey County Economic Development Authority has pledged $225,000 toward the project, $100,000 of which will be given as maintenance costs over a 10 year period.

An additional $500,000 is expected to come in mid-March from a grant from the Appalachian Regional Commission, bringing the total to $1.7 million.

As for the remaining approximately $1.9 million, Sweeney said that the committee will have to consider three options.

"We can raise the money through private donations, bond it, or borrow it," Sweeney said. "But what we need people to do is go ahead and contribute so we have to borrow less money."

All donations are tax deductible and can be given through the EDA office in City Hall, Sweeney said.

The committee will meet again on March 27 at 3 p.m. at City Hall to begin fund-raising planning in earnest, Sweeney said.

But another committee will also begin meeting to chart what courses of study will be taught based on the perceived needs from those who will be taking classes at the college.

Local billiards pro undertakes new challenge

By Larry Rowell
Staff Writer

Having won more than 300 billiards tournaments, Anthony Beeler has now turned his attention to teaching instead of trophies. A certified Level 3 instructor with the American Cuesports Alliance, Beeler offers both private instruction as well as classes to those wanting to learn to play the game.

Growing up on a farm, Anthony Beeler was given a choice of a four wheeler or a pool table.

And today, after having won more than 300 billiards' tournaments, he knows that he chose wisely.

Beeler, 36, grew up on his parents' farm in Jacktown and still lives near them, on Ky.78. An affable young man, Beeler is a reading intervention specialist for grades K-5 at Stanford Elementary School.

But in his free time, he has the heart of the old-time billiards' champs such as Willie Mosconi and Minnesota Fats. He just flat out loves the game that many call pool.

While in most homes a TV dominates the room where families gather, a pool table takes center stage in his den.

Beeler is good, professional grade good, and he realized it as a teenager.

"I got interested in pool by playing at the old K.C. One-Stop grocery store where there was two tables and they had weekly tournaments with 40 to 50 players in a partner's tournament," Beeler said.

When Beeler started winning the matches there as a 12-year-old, his friends encouraged him to go to Lancaster and play in a real pool hall, at J.R.'s Pool Room.

"When I started playing there, I actually got beat to death for a pretty good period of time," he said laughing.

It didn't take the teen long to realize why they were beating him to death—these guys were good.

"These players had played against some of the best players in the country, making them better than players at a regular pool hall. It wasn't like going to a pool room where nobody knew what was going on," he said.

Some of the better players have come from Kentucky, such as Nick Varner of Owensboro, who won the World Series Championship in the Philippines in 1990.

During the summer of 1998, Beeler said that he spent every waking moment practicing and striving to take his game to the next level.

"That summer I bought several books and I practiced the entire summer, from the College a worthwhile investment for Casey

At the risk of beating the proverbial “horse to death,” we want to keep our readers up-to-date on information about the new Casey County Education Center that is expected to be built beginning late summer in downtown Liberty.

This new college is exciting because it will afford more than 500 local students an opportunity to seek a two- and four-year college degree at an affordable price through colleges such as Somerset Community College, Campbells-ville University, and Lindsey Wilson College, among others.

With being able to live at home and commute, costs to attend could be cut substantially. In addition, non-traditional students — those who are older than the typical college student — will also be able to pursue a degree program.

Another positive note that these institutions are bringing to the college is a needs-based assessment that will help determine what courses of study will be offered where students will be able to find jobs after graduation.

SCC is already doing this at the center in Liberty by offering computer training, physical therapy, and other technical services as well as traditional basic courses in English and math.

But what also cannot be overlooked is the revitalization that building this college will bring to the downtown area.

With hundreds of students attending classes in Liberty during the week, the possibilities for new retail shops and restaurants are endless.

And, these students will also give an economic boost to established businesses both downtown and on Wallace Wilkinson Boulevard, where 90 percent of Liberty’s businesses operate.

But even amidst all the excitement, for the new college to become a reality, funds are needed to complete the almost $3.6 million project.

With $1.2 million in hand and a $500,000 Appalachian Regional Commission grant looming in mid-March, that could easily bring the total to $1.7 million, about half of what’s needed.

A local committee is diligently working to secure grant funding and other funds but the fact remains that anyone who can contribute to this worthwhile project should.

This is for the future of the city and county and surrounding counties as well.

Let’s all help to make this vision for our residents become a reality. Give a tax deductible donation today.

Downton Abbey for the Uninitiated

Everybody is gaga over Downton Abbey! I missed the first two seasons and couldn’t figure out the fascination. I started Season Three and finished it wishing I had seen the first two seasons but I soon got up to speed without even knowing what happened in them.

I had to go to the Internet and do some research on seasons one and two. This show has been described as “a period drama”. Do what? Period drama, my Aunt Fanny! It’s a soap opera! It’s “Dallas” with an English accent! It’s Southfork without cattle and oil rigs! It’s J.R. Ewing posing as the evil maid, O’Brien! It is “Dynasty” with better costumes. I love it.

Seriously, “Downton Abbey” is so campy that it truly defies description, just like “Dallas” and “Dynasty.”

Okay, there’s “big daddy,” Lord Grantham. He’s the master of Downton Abbey much like Jock Ewing was of Southfork. Somewhere along the line he married a rich American, Lady Cora, to save Downton. They have three daughters (read “no son”) who cannot inherit Downton upon his death. Two likely male cousins go down on the Titanic.

Lord G’s mother, the dowager Lady Violet lives at Downton. She is what I would call a salty old broad with a tongue like a rapier. She also meddles in everyone’s affairs.

A gold-digging Duke comes to court Lady Mary but has an affair with Thomas, the footman, instead. He is sent away immediately.

Distant cousin, Matthew, is named the heir to Downton. He and his mother come to Downton. His mother plots to get him married to Lady Mary. Lady Mary isn’t interested but the second daughter, Lady Edith, flirts with him.

Mr. Pambruk, a sexy Turk, comes to visit. He storms Lady Mary’s bedroom where he succumbs in her bed and has to be carried under darkness of night back to his bedroom. Oh, the shame! Oh, the gossip among the servants!

Along comes a new chauffeur, the liberal Socialist Irishman, Branson. He and the third daughter, Lady Sybil, are drawn to each other. He, of course, is not worthy of her according to the Grantham standards.

Lady Mary’s tryst with the Turk becomes common knowledge so she must marry to save her reputation. Sir Anthoni, a much older man, is brought in as a prospect but Lady Edith falls for him instead.

Bates, Lord Grantham’s valet, is married to an evil woman but he and Anna, a maid, start making goo-goo eyes at each other then declare their love. Thomas, the aforementioned footman, and the evil O’Brien plot against Bates because Thomas wants to be Lord G’s valet. The evil O’Brien just loves to make trouble.

Matthew and Lady Mary finally get it together and he proposes marriage.

Lady Cora gets pregnant but the evil O’Brien plants a bar of soap where Lady Cora will fall on it when she gets out of the tub. She miscarries.

Thomas, the footman, joins the Army Medical Corps and leaves Downton.

Folks, this is just a brief synopsis of what happens in the first season. Isn’t this a hoot? I think it’s worthy of being called one of the trashiest, though prettiest, soap operas ever devised.

You may call it a “period drama” but that would be gilding the lily.

How will sequestration cuts affect us?

Part of living is dealing with the unknowns when life happens. Add to the mix the political scene in Washington and Frankfort and the waters get even murkier.

All the talk about $85 billion in sequestration cuts that President Obama signed into law on Friday night caused me to question how these cuts will affect Casey Countians.

The White House issued a press release for the state of Kentucky outlining the ways cuts will hit across the state.

What we’ve been hearing is several programs such as Head Start, funding for childhood vaccinations, and cuts to education, which could put teachers’ jobs at risk as well as Title I funding for our schools.

In addition, I’ve been making phone calls to these local programs in an attempt to find out what they are being told about possible cuts. As of Monday at noon, I’ve not learned much.

One agency head told me that their agency has absorbed more than 20 percent in cuts over the past few years and these agency directors expressed the reality of having to do more every year with less funds.

What truly astounds me is the fact that lawmakers in Washington cannot or will not find solutions to these problems.

We elected them to serve, we pay them to serve, and serve they need to do, until this mess is corrected.

Granted, $85 billion, the first of a decade long $1.2 trillion in cuts, in the face of a $3.7 trillion budget, ain’t a whole lot.

But, according to the White House, we will feel the cuts.

As I mentioned earlier, a White House press release states these cuts will begin to have an immediate effect on Kentucky.

■ $11.8 in education cuts, including $7.7 million in funds for special education teachers, aides and staff.

■ Head Start school services eliminated for 1,100 children.

■ The state could lose about $677,000 in funds that provide meals for senior adults.

The biggest threat that I see is to our school district which is in relatively good financial shape, thanks in large part to a District staff and Board of Education committed to be fiscally responsible while at the same time offering quality education to all students in the county.

Obama and the Congress need to come up with a balanced deficit-reduction plan that makes smart choices for everyone that will deal with the real problem — making across the board cuts and not to just target domestic programs that hurt our school kids and deserving elderly.

With more than 70 percent of Casey County’s school children on the free and reduced lunch program, do we really want to tell them that this vital program will have to be cut? Hungry kids don’t do well in school.

Making adjustments to Medicare and Social Security to stop reckless spending and to meet the challenges of the retiring baby-boomer generation will also help.

What I cannot figure out is why Washington cannot live like most of us, on a budget?

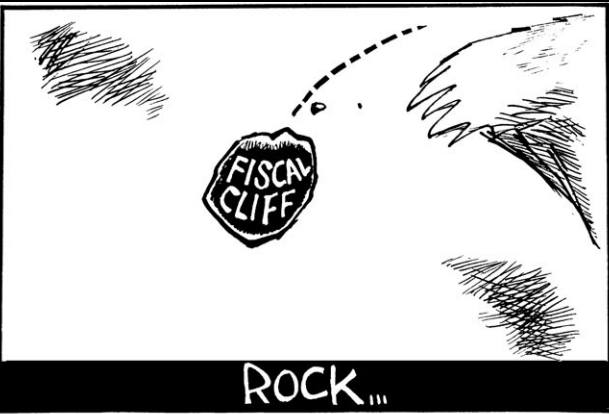

To balance a budget, it’s simple. You cannot spend more than you take in, period. Save for a rainy day, and when emergencies arise, the funds will be there to handle crises.

In addition, why not spread the pain across the board instead of just blaming entitlement programs or defense?

Sequestration cuts are just plain dumb and this cannot be the best that our national leaders can come up with.

What we need to do is contact our Congressional delegation and let them know how we feel.

It’s time for Congress and the White House to kiss and make up, for the good of all Americans.

The surprising sinkholes of life

Even though your house may appear to rest on solid ground, there is still the possibility you may find yourself suddenly awakened in the middle of the night by the rumble of your bedroom floor opening into a massive hole, sliding you and the contents of the room into its pit, interrupting your sweet dreams with dirt and debris.

And if you live in Florida, Texas, Alabama, Missouri, Kentucky, Tennessee, or Pennsylvania, you are more at risk for a sinkhole to ruin your day or night. But sinkholes occur in other places too, so you might want to sleep with one eye open, watching the bedroom floor for any unusual movements.

And don’t bother kicking the ground around your house like you do when checking a tire on a used car. The problem lies deep beneath the earth’s surface.

Just ask the people in Hillsborough County, Fla., known as “sinkhole alley,” an area that accounts for two-thirds of the sinkhole-related insurance claims in that state.

This is where Jeff Bush once lived. Bush disappeared into a sinkhole when it yawned and swallowed him and his entire bedroom while he was sleeping last Saturday. Efforts to rescue him were limited by the danger of the expanding hole and were called off by Sunday morning.

David B. WHITLOCK Guest Columnist

“This is not your typical sinkhole,” Hillsborough County Administrator Mike Merrill said of the one that took Bush’s life. “This is a chasm that covers a great distance.”

But it’s not so much the size of the sinkhole that’s startling; it’s the suddenness of its occurrence.

Anthony Randazzo, who has been studying this geological phenomenon for 40 years, knows of only two people who have died because of a sinkhole. “Usually you have some time,” said Randazzo, who lectures on sinkholes at Oxford University.

“Usually you have some time.”

But apparently not always.

It doesn’t have to be a sinkhole that punctuates your life with an unexpected period.

Sometimes it’s a tornado. Or a heart attack. Or a drunk driver. Or a weak ladder.

And your day is done; your number is called; your bell has tolled.

Jeff Bush simply went to bed and woke up in a deep hole, screaming for help.

Life folds into death that way, and suddenly we are covered with dirt.

Concerned by-standers can only cover their mouths in horror.

Jeremy Bush, Jeff’s brother, tried to rescue him.

“He was my brother, man, I loved him,” Jeremy said through tears.

And Jeff’s aunt, Janell Wheeler, cried, “I just want my nephew.”

“Usually you have time.”

But not always.

Life’s surprising sinkholes crack open with those unusuals, the exceptions that widen into gaping holes, plunging more and more victims into the underworld’s caverns of death.

Eighteen people in Jesus of Nazareth’s day weren’t expecting a tower in Siloam to fall down and kill them. It must have left people wondering who was responsible. The builder of the tower? The people who were standing in the wrong place at the wrong time? Was it some sort of punishment from God?

None of the above.

“Do you think they were any more guilty than all the others living in Jerusalem? I tell you, no! But unless you repent, you will all perish” (Luke 13:5).

Jesus reminds us we live in a world filled with unwanted surprises — some of them not the usual you’ve-got-time-to-get-out-of-the-way sinkholes — a world where towers unexplainably fall on unsuspecting victims and storms suddenly destroy people’s lives.

And Jesus indicated that our most certain certainty is found in what he called repentance, practicing the presence of Christ, living a life aligned with his Father, building on the foundation which is solid rock, Jesus himself.

As workers demolished the house that Jeffrey Bush once lived in, survivors found solace in one of the few items plucked from the wreckage: a Bible. Clutching it, they looked to the name of the street where they had lived for some 40 years — Faithway Drive.

Hopefully, with the Bible as a guide and faith in God as their support, they will continue their journey down faithway drive, traveling the precarious, uncertain road called life, knowing it’s the road to Somewhere, where the Someone who has been guiding them all along at long last waits.

Read Across America

Casey County's elementary schools celebrated Read Across America on Friday with Dr. Seuss as the theme. Guest "readers" took their favorite children's books into selected classes and read to the students.

Continued from front mental to the physical aspect, stroke and stance, those kind of things," he said.

All that hard work paid off for Beeler the next year when he won 62 tournaments.

However, the fame that accompanied winning also carried a price, being banned from tournaments.

"After you win many of the tournaments you're in, the room owners think you're bad for business so they ban you from their tournaments," Beeler said. "They may let you play monthly but that restricts you to only playing about twice a month and that hurts your game."

When Beeler resumed tournament play in 2003, he again began winning in Lancaster.

In one of the bigger tournaments, Beeler said that he beat a player from Cincinnati and the next month the player brought in a hired gun, one of top nine ball players in the world.

"I beat Shannon Murphy and then another top ranked player from Pennsylvania, Tom 'Shorty' d'Alfonso, arrived in Lancaster wanting to face off with the kid from Jacktown."

"I ran all five games — he never got to shoot," Beeler said.

But the most memorable tournament for Beeler came in 2012 when he faced the number one player in the world at the World Championships at Horseshoe Casino in Elizabeth, Ind.

"There were 400 entries and I cashed the event, meaning I finished in the money," he said.

As he climbed his way toward the top in that tournament, Beeler drew Shane Van Boening, the player ranked number one in the world.

"He beat me the first game, I beat him the second game, he won the third game 5-3 and I won the fourth game, 5-1," Beeler said.

Beeler would go on to lose the fifth and deciding game to Van Boening but not before making an impression on his opponent and the many spectators following the match.

"They're still talking about the three, four rail bank shots that I made," Beeler said.

That fame and nation-wide recognition also earned him an avenue to share his knowledge of the game.

Inside Pool magazine, with approximately 700,000 readers, recently hired Beeler to write a monthly instructional pool column.

Today, Beeler said that he competes two or three times a year in tournaments, instead choosing to move into a new direction of teaching others the sport he loves.

And as one of only 30 certified Level 3 instructors worldwide with the American Cuesports Alliance, he is more than qualified to teach.

"I'm starting to teach classes like a two day professional fundamentals class where you learn stroke, stance, alignment — all the different things you need to be a good pool player," he said.

Beeler also offers a one day kids' class and an advanced class to teach specialty shots such as banking, jump and kick shots.

For more information, Beeler can be contacted at 606-346-2953 or visit his Web site at poolteacher.com.

Needs assessment

Barry Lee and Jerome Cummins, who are district staff personnel with the Casey County School District, will head the committee.

Other members include retired educator Marilyn Coffey, SCC Liberty center Director Judy Sapp, Linda Bourne from SCC, Casey School Superintendent Linda Hatter, Dean Adams, Vice President for Student Services and Enrollment Management at LWC, Denise Fudge LWC, Cindy Dishman, CU admissions counselor, and Darryl McGehee, from Workforce Development with Lake Cumberland Area Development District in Somerset.

Lee said that the committee will focus on courses of study students are looking for.

"We're going to survey current juniors and seniors as well as all students at SCC. We're also going to see what students at CU and LWC are taking," Lee said.

Another group that the committee wants to hear from is non-traditional students, those who are older than 24 years of age, working full time, or retired individuals who may be looking to take courses to stay active.

Still, what it comes down to for Sweeney and others on the planning committee is what this college will mean to the future of the community.

But for now, it's mostly about fundraising.

"We hope the community will step up once again and value the college enough to help our fundraising efforts," he said.

Local resident grows magnificent flower

Aldena Norfleet posed beside a "voodoo" flower that she nourished into bloom recently. Norfleet has been growing the flower for years after receiving a sample of the voodoo bulb from a family member. While the bulb needs a few years of maturity before it will bloom, the rare flower produces a beautiful umbrella foliage plant that stays green all summer.

Norfleet is known for her green thumb, but has only had one bulb to bloom while in the ground. She plants the bulbs each spring then brings the larger ones inside for the winter where they sit dormant until they produce a shoot and bloom. The shoot is around 5 feet tall and the dark purple bloom is around 18 inches.

According to Norfleet, the only negative aspect of the flower is the odor. She usually has to set the flower back outside when it blooms due to the strong smell, but said it's worth it just to see the magnificent bloom develop.

Norfleet, who will be 89 in June, has given hundreds of the small bulbs to neighbors and friends, but very few of them ever get their bulb to produce a bloom.

LEGISLATIVE NEWS2013 session reaches major turning point

The 2013 General Assembly Session has come to a major turning point. As I have reported in the past, Kentucky faces an immense unfunded liability in our public employee pension system. Senate Bill 2, a product of a bipartisan, bicameral task force that heard from stakeholders, retirement experts, and independent researchers, was drafted to protect tax-payers as well as current employees' and retirees' retirement from insolvency, passed the Senate in an overwhelming bipartisan vote. (SB2 does not apply to teachers' retirement and would not impact pensions for current employees and retirees.)

The House of Representatives removed any structural changes to the strained system and proposed to pay for it with revenues from expanded lottery sales, Keno, and Instant Racing instead of discussing this part during the normal budget process of 2014. They refuse to discuss the bill with us in conference committee if we don't accept their flawed financial plan. The time for gotcha politics is over; we must have a sober discussion about this very important issue. Bipartisan task forces have worked before on unemployment insurance and corrections reform. The Senate is still working and we want bipartisan consensus. Structural changes can be made now to the pension system that will strengthen the entire fund. We are hopeful that the House Leadership will come to the table on this issue that affects all Kentuckians.

The Senate is also doing what we can to put our own house in order. I co-sponsored Senate Bill 7 which closes the loophole in the state retirement system that had allowed some legislators to significantly increase their state pensions. It also allows legislators such as myself who have opted out of the legislative retirement plan to also opt out the Kentucky Employees Retirement Plan that we are currently forced into. Incidentally, Senate Bill 2 directs that any new legislators must be in the regular state employee system. Both these bills together work to make sure that state employees are treated similarly whether you work in the Senate or on a state road.

Chris GIRDLER

In other news, the Senate continued working on other bills involving elections, gun rights, education, and protecting Kentucky from an overreaching federal government. Voting is at the foundation of our democracy. Senate Bill 1 makes it easier for military and those Kentuckians living abroad to receive election ballots. Especially for our servicemen and women, voting is a particularly meaningful action that we stateside should do everything we can to make easy and available. Electronically transmitting the ballot gets the ballot in the hands of voters earlier so it can be filled out and returned on a timely basis. The bill also establishes a group to study the possibility of electronically returning the ballots. Right now, the county clerks are concerned that the integrity of the ballot and the anonymity of the voter may be compromised if transmitted via email or fax.

Senate Bill 55, which I am proud to have co-sponsored, will move the election date of constitutional officers to presidential election years. This has two benefits: it increases voter participation because more people vote in presidential years and it has the bonus attribute of saving both local and state governments millions of dollars.

We also passed two bills protecting the right to bear arms. Senate Bill 129, that I co-sponsored, protects our Second Amendment rights by clarifying that the federal government cannot encroach on Kentuckians' right to bear arms by limiting the reach of new federal regulations. This bill takes a stand for our Tenth Amendment rights as well. Senate Bill 150 makes it easier to obtain a concealed-carry license. A companion bill to these bills is Senate Bill 80 which protects Kentuckians' rights from any outside liberal influences, specifically the United Nations Agenda 21 which seeks to strengthen a government's power of eminent domain.

We have several programs in place to help kids who may not necessarily learn in the traditional manner or need more help than their peers to understand their lessons. But there are also students who are motivated and prepared enough to want to continue pushing themselves and these children need our support too. Senate Bill 61 would allow for early graduation for qualified students who meet set requirements. Senate Bill 64 allows students who graduate early to still access their full KES funds.

The Senate passed SB 124, that I was honored to carry as the primary sponsor. This legislation will enable police officers of a sixth class city to be given the same jurisdiction as those of first through fifth class cities. In a time when our country and law enforcement budgets are pinched, SB 124 will enable rural law enforcement and rural communities to better enforce the rule of law.

As always, thank you for allowing me to be your voice and represent you in Frankfort. There is still time to contact me with any concerns or questions or comments. You can do so by calling 1-800-372-7181 toll-free. By logging on www.lrc.ky.gov, you can read the bills and see our schedule.

Leaders of alleged pyramid scheme made nearly $40M

FAYETTE COUNTY (Lexington)
— The top two executives at Fortune Hi-Tech Marketing made nearly $40 million in recent years, even as 98 percent of the Lexington-based company's independent representatives made less than $1,000 in annual commissions, according to a court-ordered report.

The Federal Trade Commission and Kentucky Attorney General Jack Conway's office shut down the multilevel marketing company on Jan. 28, alleging that it was an illegal pyramid scheme. Temporary receiver Robb Evans and Associates filed its report on Fortune Hi-Tech's finances in federal court in Chicago last week. Officials have said they charged Fortune Hi-Tech with being a pyramid scheme because it rewarded members for recruiting new members more than it did for selling products, which ranged from satellite television service to vitamins.

Kentucky jails fewer children, but more than necessary

FAYETTE COUNTY (Lexington)
— The number of children jailed in Kentucky decreased 21 percent from 1997 to 2010, but Kentucky is still confining too many youths who aren't a risk to the public, according to an official from Kentucky Youth Advocates. Kentucky was below the national average for youths who were incarcerated in 2010, according to a new report from the Annie E. Casey Foundation, a Maryland-based private charitable foundation dedicated to helping disadvantaged children. In 1997, Kentucky had 1,080 youths in confinement (a rate of 235 per 100,000 ages 10 to 17) compared with 852 in confinement (a rate of 186 per 100,000) in 2010, the report said. Nationally, there were 105,055 youths in confinement in 1997 (a rate of 356 per 100,000 ages 10 to 17) compared with 70,792 in confinement (a rate of 225 per 100,000) in 2010. In 2010, Kentucky had the 18th lowest rate in the nation of jailing children, the Kentucky Youth Advocate's news release said. Tara Grieshop-Goodwin, chief policy officer at Kentucky Youth Advocates, praised Kentucky juvenile justice officials for reducing the number of children incarcerated, but she said there is more work to be done. Grieshop-Goodwin said an analysis by her organization of data from the Kentucky Department of Juvenile Justice and Louisville Metro Youth Detention Services shows that only 3.8 percent of youths who were locked up between 2007 and 2011 were confined for violent offenses such as homicide, aggravated assault, robbery or sexual assault.

Three students nabbed in connection with bomb threat

WHITLEY COUNTY (Corbin)
— Four days after a phony bomb threat caused the evacuation of Williamsburg Plastics, Whitley County High School was dealing with its own bomb threat after graffiti was found on a restroom wall indicating someone planned to blow up the school and kill everyone inside. Whitley County Sheriff Colan Harrell said deputies had caught the student responsible for writing the threat on a restroom wall and had charged two other students, who made bomb related comments. "A student wanted to get out of school for the day," Harrell explained about the motive for the bomb threat. About noon on Feb. 26, Whitley County Sheriff's Sgt. Dave Lennon, a school resource officer, received a confession from a 16-year-old male student at the school, who admitted writing the graffiti on the bathroom wall. Harrell said the student gave police two statements. In one, he claimed it was a copycat of the Williamsburg Plastics case and in the other he admitted that he was trying to get out of school. Lennon charged the 16-year-old with first-degree terroristic threatening, which is a felony offense.

Starving horses rescued in Garrard County

GARRARD COUNTY (Lancaster)
— More than a dozen horses were rescued on Feb. 27 from a farm in Garrard County. Earlene Harris, director of Garrard County Animal Control, said she was alerted to the situation that night. Harris' veterinarian sent her a text message informing her of horses needing help. Harris and officials with animal control arrived at the farm the next day to find extremely malnourished horses. Two of the horses had been euthanized by Buckland Equine Rescue personnel, who also were made aware of the situation. President of the rescue, Christopher Takacs, said the two fillies his agency euthanized were unable to stand. Takacs said there were about 15 horses total and 13 survivors. He said the sick horses were wandering all over the property, some near the house and others in the driveway. "Working with animal control, we were able to remove the remainder of the herd, with the exception of the few they are rounding up this morning," he said. The surviving horses are being kept at Buckland South in Garrard County and are in critical condition. Takacs said there are a couple of horses "a day away from death from starvation." Both Takacs and Harris said the owner claims he was too ill to care for the horses. "We're not sure that the owner is guilty at the moment of anything other than falling on hard times," Harris said. "This is an active investigation."

Lawmaker says politics at play in hemp delay

FRANKLIN COUNTY (Frankfort)
— Sparks flew in the House Agriculture and Small Business Committee last week when the panel did not vote on a bill that would establish the regulatory framework for industrial hemp farming in Kentucky. Agriculture Commissioner James Comer and members of law enforcement laid out their positions on Senate Bill 50 during a two-hour committee meeting on Feb. 27. As the meeting neared its end, Rep. Jim DeCesare, R-Rockfield, made a motion to pass SB 50 as written, but Rep. Tom McKee, a Cynthia Democrat and chair of the agriculture committee, ruled him out of order, blocking a vote. The committee recessed to resume discussions on the bill after the House finished its business, but the meeting adjourned later in the day at McKee's desk in the House without taking up SB 50. McKee said committee members would decide whether the legislation is considered at a later meeting. McKee has introduced a House substitute to SB 50 requiring the University of Kentucky to grow and study industrial hemp on a trial basis. UK officials would report back to the General Assembly before the 2014 session under the proposed amendment. McKee said he hopes UK can get a federal waiver to grow hemp. McKee said his goal is to have the committee substitute, which he said is "much more aggressive" than SB 50, adopted. He said he's unsure on the course of action should the committee decline to approve the proposed substitute. Comer said he did not sense a lot of opposition from the committee to SB 50, sponsored by Sen. Paul Hornback, R-Shelbyville. He said the legislation had the votes to move out of committee, and he estimated the bill would pass the 100-member House with 75 or 80 votes.

Enjoy a safe spring season

The first day of spring is approaching, and that means more opportunities to head outdoors to enjoy the warm temperatures. That means it is also a good time to think about safety when planning warm weather fun in order to reduce the risk of injuries.

As you get your child's play and sports equipment ready for use this spring, take these precautions:

- Inspect bicycles, scooters and other riding toys to make sure that nuts and bolts are tight, moving parts are lubricated and bike chains have guards in place to prevent clothing from being pulled into the mechanism.

- Make sure your child's safety helmets are in good condition and still fit correctly, because a helmet that does not fit properly will not offer proper protection.

- Inspect fences and gates around backyard pools and repair them if needed.

Encourage your child to play safely when heading outdoors by:

Dr. Cassie TYNER
Liberty Family Medical Center.

- Always wearing a helmet when riding their bicycle.

- Wearing elbow and knee pads when riding a scooter.

- Riding bicycles and scooters only during daylight hours or with proper lighting.

- Allowing only one person on a backyard trampoline at one time.

Children should also be cautioned to look for vehicles as they are riding their bicycles and scooters. If your child is under the age of 8, it's very important to remind him not to ride his bicycle and scooter unless he has adult supervision.

Dr. Cassie Floyd Tyner is a board-certified family medicine physician who practices at Ephraim McDowell Liberty Family Medical Center. She can be contacted at 606-787-5963.

Commonwealth facing challenge with long-term viability of public retirement systems

Like most other states, and many local communities as well, Kentucky is facing a serious challenge when it comes to the long-term viability of our public retirement systems.

They were more than fully funded as recently as a dozen years ago, but the country's two recessions since then have taken a significant toll, much as they have with the retirement plans for millions of Americans.

The General Assembly began tackling this issue in 2003, and followed that up with more significant reforms in 2008. While those have helped significantly, it has become clear in recent months that we need to do even more to head off a crisis that, if left unchecked, could have severe repercussions just a few years down the road.

On Wednesday, the House offered its proposal to keep that from happening. We take a two-pronged approach by recommending some needed reforms and setting a prudent path to pay down the liability while working to make sure it can never grow as large again.

That payment plan would raise hundreds of millions of dollars over the next decade — without any new taxes — and be a permanent source of revenue, which the bond companies say we should have if we do not want to risk higher borrowing costs for such things as schools, roads and other infrastructure.

This is a key difference from the Senate plan, which does not recommend any source of funding other than using the budget's own minimum growth. In addition to not addressing the bond company concerns, the Senate plan will absorb tens of millions of dollars that we need for our schools and other critical programs in the wake of $1.6 billion in cuts during the last five years. Per-pupil funding for students, for example, has not seen an increase since 2008.

In addition to not raising taxes, the House plan does not take away any benefits that state and local government employees and their retirees have already earned, as has been the case in other states.

Our plan is able to accomplish this by relying on growth from two markets poised to take off: the Kentucky Lottery, which is considering expanding sales online and adding the fast-paced game of keno; and instant racing, which is now offered at the horse tracks in Franklin and Henderson.

Terry MILLS
State Representative

Current law allows the lottery to take these steps, and the Kentucky Supreme Court is weighing whether to uphold lower court rulings that have already found instant racing to be legal. So far, these two tracks have seen about $220 million wagered in the last 17 months, and other tracks are expected to follow suit if the courts ultimately confirm that there is no problem.

We have estimated that the additional money from these two revenue sources could bring in about $800 million to the state over the next decade while not harming such popular programs as the lottery-based scholarships students receive. While we would still have to dedicate more state revenue to meet the state's full pension payment during this time, there is no doubt this approach would make it much easier to fund our schools and other needed programs.

As for the retirement systems themselves, the House is proposing a limit on cost-of-living allowances unless the state can afford them and establishing reasonable time periods before a retiring government employee could return to work for the state or a local government. Another key point is that we want more oversight of the Kentucky Retirement Systems, so that we can be sure its investments are performing as well as possible. It's also important to note that none of these actions would affect teachers.

House and Senate leaders will now work to see if they can find a reasonable compromise by early next week, when the General Assembly will leave for a brief veto recess before returning later this month for the session's final two days.

While the debate on pensions was understandably the biggest topic of the week, there were several other bills making it through the House that are important as well. They would:

- Tweak last year's "pill mill" legislation that is already having a positive impact on reducing prescription drug abuse. This legislation will work in tandem with the regulations enacted by physician licensing boards, and is expected to pass the Senate easily.

- Make it easier for healthcare providers to resolve unpaid claims tied to Medicaid. This legislation will do that by giving the state's Dept. of Insurance more oversight of payment disputes with the Medicaid managed care organizations.

- Increase school safety by standardizing emergency plans and making law enforcement more aware of what those plans include.

- Establish an external child fatality and near fatality review panel to investigate cases in which a child either died or was severely injured from abuse or neglect. This panel would review state and local records and determine if officials could have done more.

- Help make it easier from those who served in the military to become firefighters or EMTs if their military training was in those fields.

I want to thank everyone who has contacted me this legislative session and encourage others to join them as we approach its final days. My address is Room 329A, Capitol Annex, 702 Capitol Avenue, Frankfort, Ky. 40601. My email address is Terry.Mills@lrc.ky.gov.

Know your family health history to prevent Type 2 diabetes

American Diabetes Association Alert Day®, Tuesday, March 26, is a one-day wake-up call to inform the public about the seriousness of diabetes. In support of this observance and throughout March, the National Diabetes Education Program (NDEP) is encouraging people to find out if they are at risk for type 2 diabetes. If left undiagnosed or untreated, diabetes can lead to serious health problems including heart disease, stroke, blindness, kidney disease, amputation, and even death.

Many serious diseases run in families, including diabetes. If you have a mother, father, brother or sister with type 2 diabetes, you have a higher chance of developing the disease. Understanding your family's history of diabetes can help you take action now to prevent or delay the development of this serious disease.

Other risk factors for type 2 diabetes include being overweight or obese, physically inactive, and over the age of 45. Diabetes is also more common in African Americans, people of African Ancestry, Hispanics and Latinos, American Indians, Alaska Natives, Asian Americans, and Pacific Islanders.

The NDEP has tools that you can use to learn more about your risk for type 2 diabetes and steps you can take to delay or prevent this disease. Visit www.YourDiabetesInfo.org/AlertDay2013 to find some of the following:

■ Diabetes Risk Test. This tool asks simple questions about weight, age, family history and other potential risks for prediabetes or type 2 diabetes.

■ NDEP's Family Health History Quiz asks four true/false questions to help people better understand their family health history of diabetes

■ NDEP's 4 Questions You Should Ask Your Family about Diabetes and Family Health History offers ways to help you talk with your family about your family's health history of diabetes.

Studies have shown that type 2 diabetes can be prevented or delayed by losing a small amount of weight — 5 to 7 percent (10 to 14 pounds for a 200-pound person) — and becoming more active. Action steps include making healthy food choices and being active at least 30 minutes, five days a week.

For more information about diabetes, contact your local health department and ask to speak to the diabetes educator or call 1-800-928-4416. You may also visit our website, www.lcdhd.org or become a fan of Lake Cumberland District Health Department on Facebook.

Deputy sheriff loses his handcuffs and prisoner loses his shoes

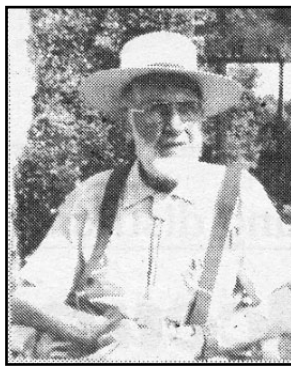

Originally published in the March 7, 1963 issue of The Casey County News

Deputy Sheriff Shirley Carman lost his handcuffs, but brought in a pair of shoes his escaped prisoner ran out of Friday night.

Carman and Sheriff Garfield Griffin found themselves behind a car Friday night not being driven to the best rules of safety. A flashing light and a siren failed to stop the car, but the yard fence of Elmer Stafford did.

After the car went through the plank fence, taking down two sections, Griffin and Carman went after the occupants of the car. The driver took off on foot with Griffin after him.

In the meantime Deputy Carman handcuffed the passenger on one hand, intending the other half of the handcuffs for the driver. The passenger failed to cooperate, and while Carman was attempting to get him out of the car, he took off.

In his hurry, the passenger lost his shoes. Carman collected them and is holding them for the runaway passenger at the Sheriff's Office. He hasn't claimed his shoes or come in with the handcuffs.

Getting out of a good pair of handcuffs is not an easy job. They are case hardened, and will not file. The best method is to knock out the pins at the hinges.

The passenger finally turned up in county court on Tuesday where he paid a public drunk fine. He came without the handcuffs. He told Sheriff Griffin he had walked about five miles barefooted, and had a badly cut foot to show for it. He promised to return before the end of the week to pay for the handcuffs, valued at around $12.

Middle school student wins essay contest

By Sharon Johnson
CCMS Curriculum Coach

Eighth grade student Breece Hayes likes to write when the topic is something that lets him express himself. Apparently, this young man expressed himself well in an essay he recently entered in a writing competition, "The Patriot's Pen." Hayes' writing entry grabbed first place at both the local and district levels.

Conducted nationwide, the first level of the competition is sponsored by the local VFW Post. Claude Wyatt, local Post Commander, has actively promoted the contest each year encouraging school participation.

Middle school language arts teachers have included the contest in their writing curriculum for several years, using it as a tool to teach students to write real-world, argumentative essays. The theme of this year's contest was "What I Would Tell America's Founding Fathers." Hayes entered the competition through his language arts class taught by Tonia Gosser. He said the topic was in-

When asked what he plans to do with the money he said, "Buy shoes. I have a thing for shoes, especially basketball shoes and football cleats. My dad says we could

Hayes plans to purchase pink basketball shoes with his prize money.

Hayes is the son of Dr. Breece and Julie Hayes of Liberty.

Lady Rebels fight for regional title

By Rita “Peat” Harris & Chris Zollner
Sports Correspondents

It was a different road from last year to the 12th Region championship game, but the Lady Rebels found themselves fighting for a regional title once again after two big wins over Burgin and Boyle County.

vs. Burgin

Casey sailed passed their first 12th Region opponents, the Burgin Lady Bulldogs (14-16) on Feb . 27 at host school Pulaski County, 62-38.

A slow start saw only 17 points between the two teams, but with a three-pointer from sophomore Christin Terry to close the quarter, Casey held a 12-5 lead.

The Lady Rebels continued to stretch their lead but saw early foul trouble from their senior leaders, causing some rotation in the lineup.

“We started off extremely well,” said Coach Randy Salyers. “We got up nine or 10 points early but then (Jasmine Johnson) and Katie Douglas picked up a couple of fouls each and I think Burgin got it down to 12-8.”

With two Lady Rebel starters taking a bench view of the game, the Lady Bulldogs could have capitalized on closing the four-point gap, but sophomore Tiara Cochran pushed the momentum in Casey’s favor.

“Tiara came off the bench and scored nine straight points, two or three off of steals and (she) really just gave us a big lift,” Salyers said.

Cochran’s run put Casey up 21-10 with four minutes to play in the second quarter and a three-pointer from junior Sarah Beard closed the half with Casey leading 27-15.

Burgin continued to see trouble reaching the basket in the second half. Neither team racked up high points in the third quarter but Casey outscored the Lady Bulldogs 11-7.

Casey put the nail in the coffin in the final quarter, putting up 24 points to Burgin’s 16.

“Third quarter and fourth quarter it was a matter of getting some people some playing time and resting our kids and try to cut down on the risk of someone getting hurt out there,” Salyers said. “Plus it gave some kids some experience and you never know when that might come into play (later).”

Terry and Lakken Miller led scoring with 14 points each, while Cochran finished with 11.

vs. Boyle County

From the opening tip, the Rebels verses Rebels semi-final regional matchup on Monday was a physical one.

After squeaking past Southwestern on Feb. 27, the Boyle County squad was looking to improve even further on their best season since 2001. In their one regular season meeting, Boyle defeated Casey 56-49, but Monday was Casey’s time to shine.

Salyers had a pretty good idea of what to expect out of the gate.

“We talked about them being physical and how they trapped against Southwestern the other night,” said Salyers. “But we had good speed from our guards and they couldn’t stop us like they wanted to.”

Boyle did draw first blood on Monday but Johnson gave Casey their first five points and set the tone for the night. Boyle managed to build their lead to five but that’s as high as it would get on the night.

Casey got past their opening nerves, buckled down and with a three from Miller and two from Cochran the first quarter ended with Boyle leading by just one point.

Less than a minute into the second quarter Douglas tied the game with three the old fashioned way but turnovers by both teams kept the score tight.

Casey looked to be headed to the locker room with a lead at the half until Boyle got a three to drop and left the floor with the score tied, 23-23.

Fouls were a factor throughout the game and Salyers had to go to his bench fairly early when Johnson and Douglas picked up early fouls in the first quarter. Douglas had three by the end of the half and Cochran and Miller had three and two respectively.

“We fought through the foul trouble and made it to halftime and if they hadn’t hit that three at the end we would have had the lead at the break,” Salyers said. “Foul trouble and free throws have been an issue the last two games. Hopefully we’re past that after tonight.”

Casey missed on their first two possessions to start the second half but Boyle wasn’t able to connect either which opened the door for Casey.

About two and a half minutes into the half, Terry hit a three and seized the lead for Casey and they would not look back.

Boyle managed to get back within one until Johnson put up a quick five points. Terry added another two before each team traded turnovers and fouls to end the third with Casey’s biggest lead of the night, 38-31.

Boyle didn’t roll over. They fought back to within two points halfway through the fourth and a late three kept the Casey lead in single digits. In the end Casey came out on top with a narrow six point margin, 49-43.

“I sort of expected it to be a close game the whole way,” said Cochran. “I knew Boyle wanted it just as bad as we did, but I knew if we all pulled together we could come out with a win.”

Johnson led scoring with 16 points followed by Terry who had a double-double with 13 points and 13 rebounds.

“I expected the game to be very aggressive, but I knew if we played the way I know we can then we would pull it out,” said Terry.

The win sent Casey into the regional championship game for the second year in a row. The team faces the Lincoln County Lady Patriots, the same opponent they played for the title last year. The Lady Patriots have been the 12th Region favorites all season after making it to the Final Four last year and not graduating a single player.

The game took place last night. Results were unavailable at press time. See next week’s issue for more on the 12th Region championship game.

SPORTS TALK

Lady Rebel teammate memories last a lifetime

I found myself slightly surprised when I heard the piece of news that came with the Lady Rebels’ win over Somerset that gave them the 47th District title. It is only the second time in school history for the team to have achieved back-to-back titles.

“Really?” I thought. Then I paused for a moment and realized it was my junior and senior years at Casey that the Lady Rebels took back-to-back titles.

Well, no wonder my thoughts on Casey’s ability to claim titles is a bit exaggerated. I have experienced some great luck around the team, so in my mind winning is the only option, right?

We won in 2003, my junior year.

We won in 2004, my senior year.

I was MIA from Casey County and Lady Rebel basketball for the next seven years while living in Louisville.

I returned and began writing in 2012 to see us win.

Now we win in 2013.

From my perspective, it’s been FOUR straight district titles for the Lady Rebels.

So my initial thought of not being able to believe that back-to-back titles were so rare was not out of a sense of arrogance for our team (although, we always have rocked, let’s be honest), but just out of the fact I couldn’t believe that the only two times it had happened were in my most recent Lady Reb experiences.

The ‘03 and ‘04 wins came within the 45th District, as Casey County did not migrate to the 47th District until ‘06.

The 2003 victory was 58-44 win over Boyle County. It was led by a lone senior, Amanda Wethington, along with a strong class of juniors.

In 2004, when those juniors became seniors, Meagan (Murphy) Davidson, Kelli (Warner) Gould, Beth (Patterson) Littlejohn and Tabitha (Yaden) Wesley led the team in a triumph over Danville, 57-46.

Seeing the joy and true sense of accomplishment and victory in the faces of this year’s Lady Rebel team brought back the flood of memories from my own ‘03 and ‘04 experiences.

While I chose to give up my uniform after my sophomore year, I did stay on the Lady Rebel squad to travel as a manager, as my heart was still in the center of the special team composed of most of my best friends. I was on the bench when the final buzzer rang and were officially champs. I even found a piece of my 2004 net while reminiscing this weekend.

While I got in my car for a quiet drive home with my husband on Saturday evening, I wondered about the special bus ride home the Lady Rebels were having.

Did they have a caravan of cars behind them and in front of them?

Were they singing, laughing and acting a fool? It’s funny how something so simple like that made the night that much more special. Coach didn’t care how crazy we were. For that night, the team earned it.

Once in city limits, the bus would take us on a lap around the town for congratulations, hootin’ and hollerin’ from parents, fans, classmates and friends. Back at Casey’s gym we’d continue to celebrate.

Usually by then we had picked out whose house (whichever parent would have us) we would head to for closing out the night. Usually other friends would join us here as well and it would be a late, late night.

I’m not quite up on the current traditions for celebrating a district title, but whatever they may be, I hope those girls had a blast on Saturday night with each other, with their coaches and parents, and with all of their best friends and fans.

I can guarantee you that no matter how long basketball stays in your life or how close in touch you keep with those teammates in the future, the memories of celebrating this accomplishment will stay with you.

Now, I just hope my good luck streak with the Lady Rebels and district titles continues and I have not just jinxed it instead!

Salyers inducted into Basketball Coaches Hall of Fame

By Rita “Peat” Harris

Any Casey County sports fan who has followed the Lady Rebel basketball team in the past 15 years knows Randy Salyers. The long-time women’s head coach has developed the team into a well-respected program decorated with multiple district, region and state accomplishments.

What many may forget or not even realize is that before

Salyers was directing traffic from the bench, he was leading the show on the court as one of Casey County’s top basketball athletes himself.

Last weekend Salyers was honored at the 12th Region boys’ championship game with his induction to the 12th Region Basketball Coaches Association Hall of Fame.

“The boys’ 12th Region coaches have been doing this for a long time,” said Salyers. “You can get in as a player, a coach or a support personnel.”

Salyers played for the Rebels from 1973 until he graduated in 1977. During his career he was a varsity starter from his sophomore year on up and put up 1,500 points.

His recognitions during those years were many, including earning all-district honors for three years and 12th Region tournament honors for two. He was named the 12th Region Tournament

MVP and named to the Third Team All-State as a senior.

Salyers went on to play at the collegiate level for four years at Belmont College in Nashville, Tenn.

Salyers was first told of the honor on Feb. 24 when the 12th region coaches and officials met to draw for the boys’ and girls’ tournaments.

“I knew they give it to some and I guess as the years go by and the longer you’ve been graduated the less likely it is to happen so I hadn’t really given it any thought,” Salyers said, admitting to the surprise of the honor.

Salyers was inducted to the 2013 Class along with five contributors and three other players.

Pierce, Salyers sign to play tennis at Campbellsville

By Rita "Peat" Harris
Sports Correspondent

Two Casey senior athletes will attend Campbellsville University next fall to continue both their educations and their athletic careers. Hunter Pierce and Luke Salyers will play tennis for the Tigers while Salyers will also become the university's official Tiger mascot.

Hunter Pierce

A five-year Casey County tennis athlete, Pierce will begin his senior year with the Rebel tennis team without the pressure of impressing college coaches since securing a future in the sport is already assured.

Campbellsville coach Kyle Caven noticed Pierce in a tournament hosted by the university in the past year. Pierce admits that his summer play and play outside of the regular high school season were a big part of his pursuit of a future in tennis.

"I normally play during the summer, but I was definitely hoping to get noticed and make some impressions," Pierce said about his play since finishing the 2012 season. "They seem like really great people and the campus is really nice."

As freshmen, tennis athletes are not eligible for scholarship money from the university, but Pierce plans to prove his worth and hopes financial aid will come with the sport in the future.

For Casey County, Pierce competes in both singles and doubles matches but feels his skills as a doubles player are more likely to be utilized at Campbellsville.

"I'm excited to go to Campbellsville and start practicing with all of the guys," Pierce said. "I'm not sure what to expect but I'm just excited to start the next phase of my life."

Former Casey teammate, Brad Jeffries, a 2011 Casey graduate, played tennis at Campbellsville for one season before transferring this past year to the University of Louisville. However, Pierce will not walk on to a team of total strangers, as Salyers will be by his side.

"More than likely I'll be rooming with Luke," Pierce said, noting that the proximity to home is another draw of the university. "(Campbellsville) is only 20 minutes from my house. (My parents) will probably try to come to the home matches."

Meanwhile, Pierce still has his senior season ahead along with summer play.

"I would like to see several of our teammates make it to state and I would like to make it to state," he said. "This summer I will probably mainly be traveling around and going to tournaments because Campbellsville doesn't actually start practicing until classes start."

Pierce, the son of Chris and Lisa Pierce, plans to pursue studies in a medical related field.

Luke Salyers

For those who have often wondered whose face is behind Rowdy, the Casey County High School mascot, the secret is out. After four years of entertaining and interacting with the Rebel crowd, Salyers will take his skills as a mascot to the collegiate level and be Campbellsville's official Tiger mascot.

The transition to the Tiger has already begun as Salyers has already tried out the furry suit a time or two.

"Since I'm taking dual credit classes through Campbellsville as a senior, I'm technically a Campbellsville student. They got the 'ok' and I went down there and mascotted for them," Salyers said.

Head cheerleading coach Vanessa Adkins worked with Salyers to attain scholarship money to represent the university as the tiger, meaning his mascot role will also be incorporated into cheer routines.

"I'll be at all of the sporting events, community events; I'll go to competitions with the cheerleaders," Salyers said. "I guess I'll learn to do flips and stuff when I'm working with the cheerleaders."

Aside from maintaining his physical condition for mascotting, Salyers was invited last summer to train with the mascots at the University of Tennessee along with other high school students.

"It was a very good experience," he said. "They taught me a lot of things. I'd never met anyone who did it."

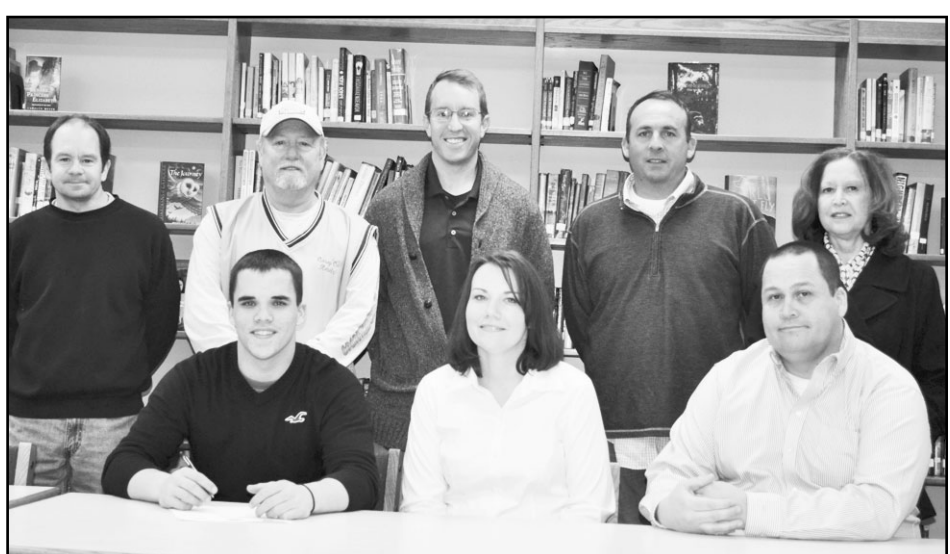

Salyers will also be swinging a racket at Campbellsville and is excited for the opportunity to continue both interests.

"Northern Kentucky University and Union College had been the top two (college choices) and then Campbellsville came and offered me tennis and that kind of sealed the deal," Salyers said.

Salyers has played tennis on and off nearly his whole life, but it was not until his freshman year at Casey County that he joined the team.

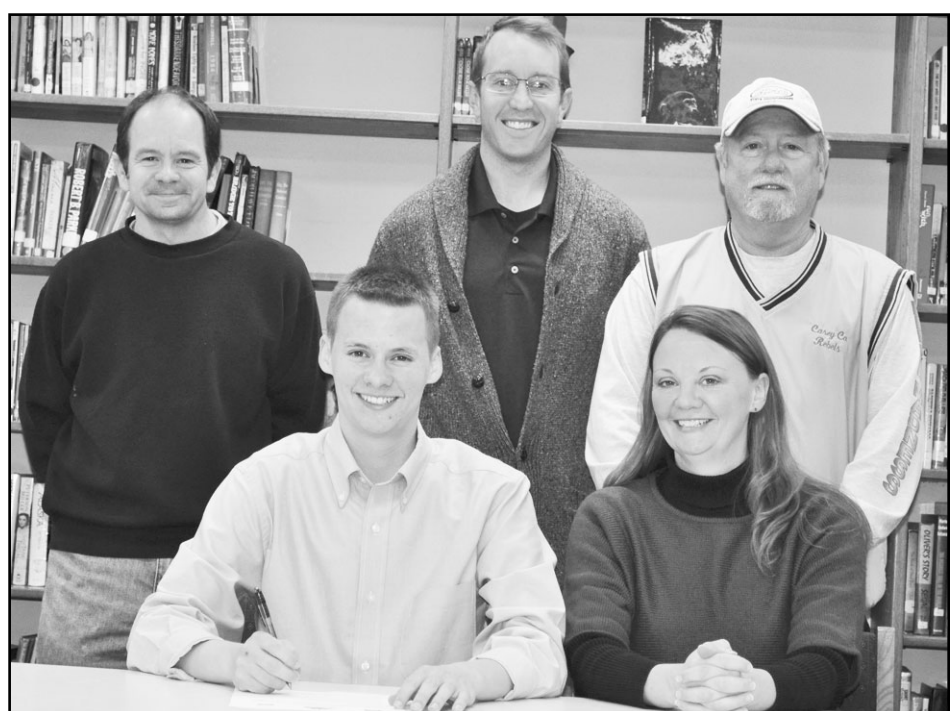

"I'm glad I get to go (to Campbellsville) and play tennis with a teammate I've played with for four years," Salyers said.

Meanwhile, Salyers has one more season with the Rebel tennis team that will kick off very soon.

"It won't be as stressful and it will be more relaxing and I can perform to my best knowing I don't need to be stressed about anything," Salyers said on his senior season, now that his future is determined. "I would like team win region again. I don't care if I win region or not but I'd just rather the team do good."

Salyers is the son of Margaret Salyers and David Noe and plans to pursue the field of education.

LEGAL NOTICE
Texas Eastern Transmission, LP
Federal Energy Regulatory Commission
Docket No. CP13-84-000

Notice is hereby given that Texas Eastern Transmission, LP ("Texas Eastern"), on February 27, 2013, filed with the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission ("FERC") an Application for a Certificate of Public Convenience and Necessity and for Related Authorizations and Order Approving Abandonment authorizing the installation, construction, ownership, operation and maintenance of its proposed Texas Eastern Appalachia to Market Project 2014 ("TEAM 2014 Project" or "Project") in FERC Docket No. CP13-84-000 ("Application").

The TEAM 2014 Project's facilities consist of construction of approximately 33.6 miles of various segments of new 36-inch diameter pipeline loop and related above-ground facilities in Fayette County, Perry County, Dauphin County, Lebanon County and Berks County, Pennsylvania; installation of four new compressor units and associated facilities at the existing Delmont, Armagh and Entriiken compressor stations in Pennsylvania; abandonment in place of seven compressor units at the Delmont compressor station; uprate of three existing compressor units at the existing Uniontown compressor station; and modifications and maintenance work at 41 existing facility locations along Texas Eastern's natural gas transmission system in Pennsylvania, West Virginia, Ohio, Kentucky, Tennessee, Alabama, and Mississippi to allow for bi-directional flow on the Texas Eastern system.

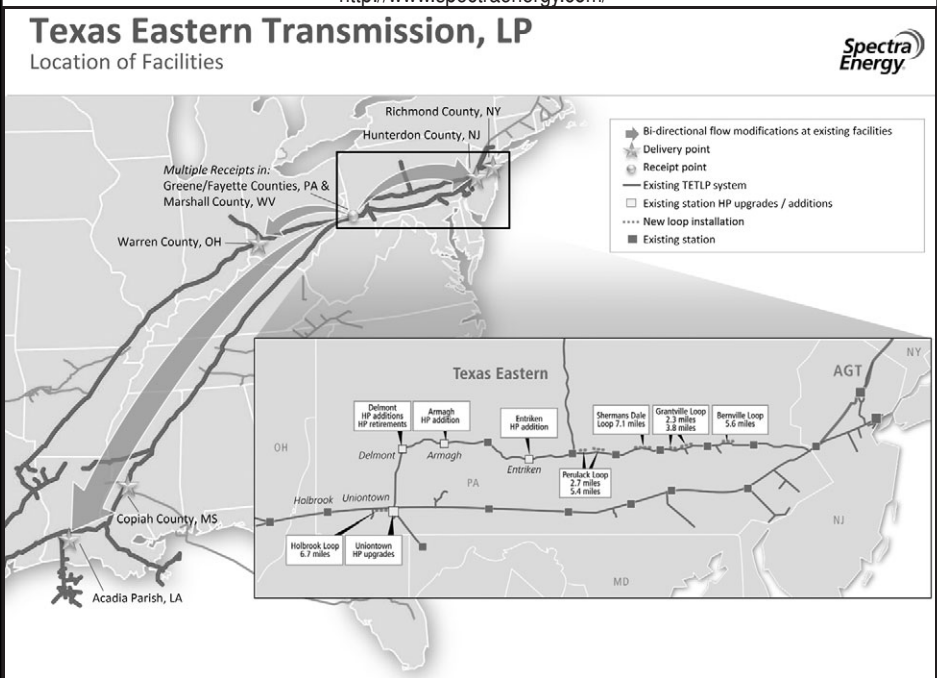

The TEAM 2014 Project will efficiently and cost-effectively expand the Texas Eastern system to accommodate increased natural gas production from the Appalachian region and deliver these critically needed natural gas supplies to diverse markets in the Northeast, Midwest, Southeast and Gulf Coast. The proposed in-service date for the Project is November 1, 2014.

Notice of the Application will be mailed to affected landowners, and local, state and federal governments and agencies involved in the Project. An electronic copy of the Application and supporting documents are on file in the public libraries and/or local offices in communities impacted by the aforementioned facilities. Texas Eastern will need to acquire permanent and temporary property interests from a limited number of landowners for the proposed facilities. The Project is expected to have minimal impacts on landowners, communities and the environment.

For further information on becoming an intervenor or commentor in the FERC process and/or to obtain FERC's pamphlet entitled "An Interstate Natural Gas Pipeline on My Land? What Do I Need to Know?", visit FERC's website (<http://www.ferc.gov/>) or contact FERC toll free at (877) 337-2237 or (866) 208-3372. Texas Eastern is an indirect, wholly owned subsidiary of Spectra Energy Corp, a North American leader in developing infrastructure and connecting major natural gas supply basins to growing markets. Texas Eastern is engaged in the business of transporting natural gas in interstate commerce. Cattle producers hear about wrapping hay

By Larry Rowell
Staff Writer

A company with an international reach pitched its hay wrapping machine to local livestock farmers at a recent meeting of the Casey County Cattlemen's Association.

Bernard Adam, a Canadian cattle producer from Bromont, Quebec and a representative for Tubeline, addressed the group of about 75 cattle producers on Feb. 25 at the Central Kentucky AG/EXPO Center.

Adam took attendees through the process from growing a crop of alfalfa to mowing and then wrapping it in silage film for long-term storage in a field.

Adam said that farmers should mow the alfalfa during the vegetative stage in order to have a second crop in 28 days.

"You will have optimum feed value, good resale value, and time to do one or two extra crops," Adam said.

Adam said that compared to baling hay and leaving it uncovered in the field, there are many advantages to wrapping hay, the first of which has to do with when the hay is wrapped.

Optimally, grass that is mowed in a wide swath at 10 a.m. should be ready to

Members of the Casey County Cattlemen's Association learned about the advantages of wrapping hay at their meeting on Feb. 25 at the Central Kentucky AG/EXPO Center. bale and wrap the next day at 8 a.m., a time period of 22 hours. The crop should have a moisture content of between 45 to 65 percent depending on the grass or legumes, he said.

Adam told the group that farmers lose money by allowing uncovered hay to rot in the field.

"On a 4-foot by 4-foot bale, up to 44 percent of that bale will be refused by cows because it's rotten. For every 100 bales of forage of dry hay, you need to make 133 bales. By wrapping that hay in $150 worth of silage film, a farmer can save 33 bales and at approximately $40 a bale, that's a savings of $1,320," he said.

Adam also addressed the issues concerning wrapping in the field or at the storage site.

Wrapping at the storage site is preferable if it can be wrapped under four hours between baling and wrapping and if the distance is less than two miles.

During a long haul, Adam said that the ventilation of unwrapped bales may create fermentation problems.

Wrapping bales in the field eliminates weather threats and the risk of sweating and ventilation if the hay has to be hauled a long distance.

But overall, wrapping hay with good quality silage film that retains CO₂, prevents mold and sun penetration, can preserve that hay for up to two years, saving the farmer money.

Still, the bottom line for Adam is producing and storing a top quality hay which in the long run will add more weight to cattle and bring a higher price at market.

Eric Ellsworth, Territory Manager and Product Manager for ACI Distributors and who lives in Lincoln County, said that the basic wrapping machine costs between $25,000 and $30,000, depending on the options.
